"BOOSTERS" FORM AD CLUB AT M. U.

Permanent Organization for Spreading News of the University.

It's the Ad Club of the University of Missouri now.

A few days ago a club known as the "Boosters" club was organized. It was composed of the presidents of the city, county, state and sectional clubs of the university. Saturday night the organization was made permanent and the name was changed to the Ad Club of the University of Missouri. A constitution was adopted.

The purpose of the club, as stated in the constitution, is "to advertise the University of Missouri 'back home,' and to foster a more united spirit among the students at the University of Missouri from the various cities, counties and sections of Missouri and other states."

The club now has twenty-six members. The presidents or specially elected representatives of county clubs may become members of the Ad Club by notifying the secretary of their election.

The meeting Saturday night was held at the Missouri Store cafe. It was preceded by a dinner, the first of a series the club will give. Arrangements have been made to invite speakers to attend the dinners of the club and talk on various means of advertising the university.

A letter of greeting to the club from Justin A. Runyan, industrial commissioner of the Commercial Club of Kansas City, was read. Mr. Runyan is a graduate of the University of Missouri.
He wrote that he was strongly in favor of the Ad Club and desired to become a member. He sent the club suggestions for advertising the university.

Four new members were added to the club Saturday night. They are:
G. W. Glasgow, Macon county; Roy C. Bishop, Montgomery county; P. C.
Wilkinson, Kansas City club; and L. V.
Stigall, DeKalb county. The total membership of the club is now twenty-six. A committee was appointed to see that all counties of the state having students at the university organize county clubs. A provision for honorary members was also made at the meeting.

HORSE SOLD FOR $3.75.

Auctioneer Wouldn't Stand in Rain and Plead with Jokers.

"What am I bid, gentlemen, for this fine specimen of horseflesh? You can see she is sound in wind, body and—"
"One dollar," a man jokingly bid.
"One dollar she is. Who'll raise it?
This is a fine opportunity to buy a Christmas present that will be useful as well as ornamental. How much did you say?"

"I'll give two dollars," ventured another joker.

"Be careful or you'll pay more than the halter you'll buy for her," said the auctioneer. "Who said three? Three am I bid? Who'll make it four? Three six bits over there. Well, I ain't going to stand out here in the rain any longer, so she goes for $3.75 to the gentleman over there."

Thus was an old and ragged, but seemingly sound horse auctioned off in the drizzling rain in front of the old court house columns Saturday.
The auctioneer shouted the merits of his horse for half an hour, but the bidders were few and the horse was finally sold to a horse dealer for $3.75.
"That man surey did git a bargain," said an old negro who was standing by.
"Why, if that boss dies tomorrow, he kin git $2.50 for de hide."

An Amazon of the Keyboard.

The London (Eng.) Guardian says of Miss Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler: "We consider her the most interesting and stimulating of living amazons of the keyboard." The London Musical Standard critic calls her "The Duke of the piano-forte." The St. James Gazette calls her "one of the finest pianists ever heard." The Volkszeitung, of Co-logne, Germany, calls her the "new origin of the keyboard." The world-famous artist appears at Christian College next Wednesday evening. Seats on sale at Allen's music store. ADV.
